Then Hector did something surprising. He swam between Max and the spearguns. He held up a hand to the divers. It was the most basic diving signal. Stop!

Hector waved his other hand frantically at Max. Max didn't need telepathy to know what this meant. Go! Get out of here!

Max did as he was told. He turned and streaked out of the room and back along the corridor. Then he slowed down, thinking.

Max didn't trust Hector, but he trusted the other two divers even less. Also, Max couldn't risk Hector getting hurt. If anyone could help Max turn back into a human, it was Hector.

Max was starting to get used to being a 'Star light, star bright, first star I see tonight ...' So begins the wish that changes everything—for Geppetto, the Blue Fairy and a little puppet named Pinocchio. The Blue Fairy isn't supposed to grant wishes in the village of Pariva, but something about this one awakens some long-buried flicker within. Perhaps it's the hope she senses beneath the old man's loneliness. Or maybe it's the fact that, before she was the Blue Fairy, she was a young woman named Chiara with a simple wish: to help others find happiness. Her sister, Ilaria, always teased her for this, for Ilaria had big dreams of her own. Forty years later, Chiara, now the Blue Fairy, defies the rules of magic to help an old friend. But she's discovered by the Scarlet Fairy, formerly Ilaria. They decide to settle things with a good old-fashioned bet, with Pinocchio and Geppetto's fate hanging in the balance.
