SHORT READS NON-FICTION short texts for all reading abilities, with close reading activities to develop deep comprehension.

BOXES 1 AND 2

Focus not only on close reading but also on developing critical phonics and spelling skills, and high-frequency sight words in a reading context.

BOXES 3, 4 AND 5

Students are guided carefully through an exploration of text that involves re-reading several times for a variety of purposes.

PREPARE AND READ

Prompt questions establish context and introduce ideas.

READ CLOSELY

Teacher's Guides provide strategies for developing critical analysis and interpretation.

DISCUSS

Prompts for every card are provided to stimulate in-depth discussion in a small group session. They cover basic comprehension, text/language features, grammar, punctuation and spelling, and higher-order thinking skills.

WRITE

Writing tasks engage students in breaking down the text, and responding to it on a sophisticated level.

HOW LONG IS EACH LESSON?

The questions and discussion prompts in the Teacher's Guide are designed to be used with teacher-led, small groups of students. Because the texts are short, your students should be able to read, re-read and discuss a card in one lesson.

WRITE

Have students choose either one of the following options for writing, or do both.

- Make a word web with a drum in the middle. In the outer circles write facts about drums you learnt from the card. (Information/Explanation)
- Which drum on the card would you most like to play? Write three sentences explaining why you chose that drum. Use information from the text and pictures in your answer. (Opinion)

Additional Note: The sound wave shown at the top of page two is often seen in hospitals. It is an electrocardiogram that displays the steady beat of a human heart! Discuss with students other things around us that have steady beats, for example, trains, clocks, cars, washing machines and electric fans.

In the activities, students will:

- re-read the card deeply
- reorganise information to present it in a new way
- form and articulate an opinion, based on evidence from the text.

1. BEFORE READING

Before reading the story, as a class look closely at the cover and title, and discuss what you can learn from it. Some things you might wish to include in your discussion could be:

- What does the image on the cover show?
- What is happening in the cover art?
- What do you think might happen in the story?
- What does the phrase 'give me some space' commonly mean?
- What do you think the title Give me some Space! is being used to mean in this story, and why do you think so?
- Who do you think is the intended audience of this story—who might it be written for?

GIVE ME SOME SPACE!

WRITTEN & ILLUSTRATED BY PHILIP BUNTING

2) What does it mean when the author says that with each birthday Una's cakes become ascendingly astronomical?

3) How do you think the astronomically themed birthday cakes shown in the book could be constructed? What do you think the different features of them might be made of, and how could they be held together?

4) Design an astronomical birthday cake of your own. Draw a labelled diagram of your design sharing the construction and composition details, as well as a coloured 'artist's impression' of what the finished product should look like. For a challenge, make a 3D model of your cake from cardboard or modelling clay. For a super challenge you can try baking and decorating your cake design.

5) What do we commonly call a lap around the sun? Why do you think the author chose to use this phrase to describe the passing of time?

6) What do all the posters on the walls of Una's home show? Look carefully at all the illustrations in the story, and working in pairs make a list of the different space-related posters and artwork that you can see in Una's home. Choose one of the items on your list and research it further. Use your research findings to create an informative poster of your own.

7) Una's goldfish is called Neil. Who might he be named after, and why?

8) Una tries to build a rocket powered by soda and mints — but it fails to take her to space (can you think of a reason why it didn't work?)

- Test this out for yourself and see how high a fountain you can make by putting mints in a bottle of soda.
- In pairs or small groups, research the chemical reaction between soda and mints, and design and test a model rocket propulsion system using them.
- Which types of mints work best?
- Which type of soda?
- How can you find this out?
- Create a short educational documentary showing both your research and testing process, and your final test-flight.
- In your documentary be sure to share:
  - what happened;
  - why you got results you did;
  - how you researched the matter;
  - where you found your information;
  - and what experiments you designed and performed in the course of your project.
- Suggest some possible improvements to your design.

9) When Una sees the spinning, sparkling sphere a trillion possibilities rush through her mind. What do you think these might have been? In small groups, make a list of all the things that Una might have thought of, and use your list to help you write a space adventure of your own.

10) Where did Una find life in space? Why is this so important?

11) What is the most important message in the story? Why do you think this message is so essential for everyone to share? Were you expecting this message (or a similar one) at the end of the story or did it come as a surprise to you?

12) When Una packs a picnic to take into space, what does she put in her lunch basket? What food would you take and why? Create a menu for a space-picnic.

13) What is astronaut ice-cream, how is it different from regular ice-cream, and why do you think that astronauts don't get ordinary ice-cream in space?

14) Using the artwork in the book as inspiration, create a space-themed painting of your own. Experiment with water-colour background washes, and different methods for creating a starscape on top of them.

15) What is Una's new mission now that she has found life in space? How can you make her new mission your own—and why should we all make it our mission? Brainstorm a list of practical and achievable things that will help us all achieve Una's new mission.

16) How does the end of the story make you feel? What actions does the story inspire you to take? Write an illustrated paragraph sharing your response to the story overall and more specifically to the ending.

GIVE ME SOME SPACE!

SYNOPSIS

Ever since she was a baby, Una has been fascinated with space. Her birthday cakes are all astronomy themed, her walls are covered with space posters, and even her goldfish is named after an astronaut. Una plans to become an astronaut herself one day. But she will have to wait to become an astronaut, but waiting isn't exciting! So she takes matters into her own hands, designs and builds herself a spacesuit, and creates a rocket to carry her out into the furthest reaches of our solar system. Surrounded by all the wonders of the solar system, Una spots a scintillating blue orb in the distance, and when she comes closer she realises that she has made the most amazing discovery of all—she has fulfilled her mission and found life in space! Una's greatest discovery is not an alien spacecraft though, but the realisation that our planet is the most amazing spacecraft ever. It is ours to cherish and nurture, and our responsibility to protect it and all the life which it shelters and nourishes. Earth truly is the most amazing thing we could ever find when exploring space.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR/ILLUSTRATOR

Philip Bunting is a designer, illustrator and creative director. During 10 years in the creative industries, he has seen his work published around the globe; and designed more magazines, websites, identities, books and apps than he could poke a stick at. His titles have gained international attention and sales, with his debut title, Mopoke (2017) being listed for several awards, including being long listed for the 2018 ABIA's and an Honour Book in the 2018 CBCA Picture Book of the Year

THEMES

Key Themes include:

Space exploration; astronomy; science; inventiveness; passion; the solar system; Earth; environmental conservation; hope; wonder; perspectives and viewpoints.

Writing Style:

Written in the third person, that of Una. Bunting shares her hopes, dreams, and motivations, before presenting her imaginary journey amongst the planets as a factual experience. Descriptions make good use of such literary devices as alliteration and metaphor, while her thoughts and feelings are consistently made clear to the audience. In the final pages Bunting seamlessly transitions to directly addressing the reader, while the viewpoint expands to encompass the readership—and humanity—as a whole. Sentences are clear and well suited to reading aloud, while the story is whimsically engaging as well as factually informative, and the overall message is one that is just as relevant to a senior citizen as it is to the youngest of readers.

ILLUSTRATION STYLE

Created using Bunting's signature style featuring solidly shaped figures and foreground details set against a variety of densely coloured backgrounds, the artwork in Give me some Space utilises a broad palette of bright, natural, and deep shades and tones. The illustrations are a mixture of single page spreads, double page spreads, and half-pages with multiple instances of interrelated vignettes. Different backgrounds utilise a wide range of colours and shades, while within each individual illustration the background colours are cohesively palette-limited. The vastness of space is shown in sweeping lines and natural curves while figures and foreground details are blockier with straighter edges and abrupt curves. The visual and textual narratives are densely interwoven throughout the entirety of the story, and the distinction between illustrations and text is at times ambiguous, the two aspects of the dual narrative building upon and enhancing each other throughout.
